WHO IS MARCUS WHEELHOUSE?

Marcus Wheelhouse is a former touring golf professional, and now the director of Wheelhouse Golf (WG) at JK's World of Golf. He has recently expanded his coaching into Akarana Golf Club in Mt Roskill where he stills holds the course record.

WG hosts corporate golf days, holds golf clinics and coaches all levels from beginners, to recreational golfers, right through to some of New Zealand's top amateurs and professionals. Marcus has also been involved as a television golf presenter/commentator as the "on course" commentator for the NZ Open on Sky TV. He appears regularly on the Holden Golf Show on Sky and spent over four years hosting a weekly radio show with legend broadcaster Brenden Telfer on Radio Sport. He currently writes a "Monthly Tips" article in NZ Golf Magazine. Marcus also works with Elite Golf Tours and hosts a group of golfers to the Masters at Augusta every year.

Playing career: Marcus started playing the age of eight and has enjoyed plenty of success. He was ranked number one amateur golfer in the world in 1995 and consequently was awarded Auckland sportsman of the year. He'd won over 31 amateur tournaments; including being the only player to successfully defend the New Zealand Strokeplay Championship in 93-94.

The Aucklander was a member of the New Zealand Eisenhower trophy team in 1994 and won six times overseas including the Malaysian amateur and the prestigious Lake Macquarie championship in Australia.

Marcus turned professional in January 1996 and was named rookie of the year on the Australasian tour after which he played in Europe for five years on the Challenge Tour.

From there Marcus changed tack and went to the USA to play on the Nationwide and Mini tours. After an injury in 2006 he returned home in 2007 to regroup but again changed his outlook and started to teach the game whilst finishing a full qualification as a class AAA PGA member.

Marcus is now coaching some of the best upcoming players in the country including Ryan Fox, Nick Gillespie Fraser Wilkin and Daniel Pearce and Harry Bateman. He also runs the Wheelhouse Golf Academy which is designed to nurture young players to attain their dreams in golf and life.

In 2015 Marcus was appointed the Auckland golf coach for the Men and the Women and is in charge of 25 player squad and their program and is a member of Sport New Zealand's PCA programme which aims to upskill New Zealand coaches to produce elite athletes.

He is also the Tour player representative on the NZPGA board and still plays in varied Pro Am events.

The 42 year old lives in Auckland with his wife Melodie Robinson and two young children Jenson and Freddie Wheelhouse.
